

Dear FCC Commissioners & Staff:

I live in a rural community and NO major ISP even bothers offering dial-in service here. ANY proposed rule change that could deny small ISPs access to the telephone network would be disasterous.

I also do ISP support for small ISPs and your reconsideration of the rules that require telephone companies to provide ISPs access to the public switched phone network would put ALL of my customers in Utah and Nevada out of business. These people provide a necessary service to the community, and the major ISPs will NOT fill this gap.

Also any change in these rules would be very anti-competative, since only the baby bells would decide who they let be an ISP in their service area.

Sincerely,
